

CUTS CITEE Networking Profile

January 2007

CUTS CITEE believes that networking is crucial for conducting effective research and advocacy. It is our policy to engage renowned external experts for research activities as well as research in-house, and to conduct advocacy collectively.

Working with more than 50 research institutions and non-governmental organisations all over the world: from Southern Africa to South East Asia

Close association with a number of networks: South Asia Watch on Trade, Economics & Environment in South Asia to International Centre for Trade and Sustainable Development, Geneva, which helps in reaching out to a larger audience

Many partner organisations are closely working with respective governments, as experts in policy-making bodies

Engagement with partners in several projects over time, resulting in dynamic and long-term relationship

Networking Objectives

- Conduct joint research on trade, economics and environmental issues, especially highlighting Southern perspectives
- Exchange on regular basis information on programmes, activities and projects of mutual interest with a view to ensuring coordination, complementarity and mutually supportive cooperation, and where appropriate, joint action
- Cooperate in conducting training and exchange programmes to enhance capacities and better understanding of relevant actors on trade, economics and environmental issues

The characteristics that make CUTS interesting in my view are its constructive and well-reasoned approaches to analyses of development topics and trade-related issues. The outreach activities of CUTS and the involvement of researchers and government officials from other developing countries are of great value. Cooperation and alliance-building between developing countries is probably one of the more efficient ways of accelerating the capacity of developing countries to take part in the international dialogue on economic issues as well as preparing for negotiations in organisations such as the WTO...One particular challenge is how to ensure that civil society organisations in developed countries work towards the same goal as the civil society organisations and the poor populations in developing countries. Anders Ahnlid, Director-General for Trade, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Sweden
